DOCTOR RETURNS AFTER FLOGGING BY UNKNOWN MEN

From City After Rough Treatment.

ABDUCTORS NOT KNOWN

Goldberg Declares Abductors
Not Members of Klan;
Doctor Riled.

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 7.—Dr. B. Heston Goldberg, who was abducted last night by four masked men, walked into police headquarters this morning. He told the police that he regained consciousness while lying in a pool of mud about 13 miles from the city after being beaten and robbed.

The physician expressed the belief that his abductors were seeking narcotics which he carried in his emergency kit.

Dr. Goldberg said he had been bound and gagged just as he was putting his auto into the garage for the night. The abductors sped away in a car of their own taking what is known as the 23rd street road.

When he regained his senses early this morning he said he was lying in a mud hole on the road 13 miles in the country and his diamond ring and $60 in cash were gone as well as other personal effects. The gag and rope with which he was bound had been removed. "I do not know what happened," the doctor said.

Dr. Goldberg said he signaled several passing motorists but none stopped. He said he finally made his way to a farm house where he received temporary aid. He spoke vaguely of riding in the farm house in an auto, but when asked where the farmer let him out in the city he said he had walked the entire 13 miles.

The physician was unable to describe any of his assailants, beyond the fact that he did not think they were "Ku Kluxers." He said he had several K. K. K. patients and was sure the organization had no grievance against him.

"They slapped me," he said tersely, "and I don't know who they were." Dr. Goldberg was confined to his bed this morning. County authorities said they would not attempt to proceed with the investigation until he was able to be questioned. Their only clue is a description given by Mrs. Goldberg who tried to drive the quartet from her husband, and a hat sold by a local haberdashery believed to have been lost by one of the men during the scuffle with Dr. Goldberg.

SENATE SLASHES FREE TEXT BOOK MEASURES

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 7.—The senate took action on the free text book bill today, reducing the appropriation of $2,229,000 carried by the house bill to $950,000. The books would be supplied free only to grades below the high school, according to the amended bill.

The house devoted the morning session largely to a parliamentary discussion. C. W. Miller of Hughes county started the clash by moving that the rules committee be discharged and charging that the calendar had been changed. Representative Brice declared that House bill No. 469 to place cement manufacturers under control of the state corporation commission, which had been made a special order for today, had disappeared from the calendar. Speaker Murray Gibbons ruled that the house could not discharge a permanent committee.

Large Attendance Expected at Meet of Church Members

A large attendance is expected at the annual business meeting at the First Presbyterian church tonight, according to E. O. Whitwell, pastor.

Business matters relative to church work, progress and problems for the year will be discussed. Officers for the new year will be elected and a financial budget announced by the church.

The fiscal church year ends on March 1 and begins April 1.

Schwabe to Return Home.

Widow Tries to Avenge Death of Her Husband

Mrs. Mary Parisi.

(By Central Press)

NEW YORK, March 5.—"An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth." That may have been the law of the ancient Biblical days, but it doesn't go in this day and age.

Police here say that Mrs. Mary Parisi invoked the ancient law and as a result she is now at liberty on bail awaiting a hearing on the charge of felonious assault.

According to authorities, the complaint arose over an attempt by Mrs. Parisi to mete out to her brother-in-law, Francesco Favara, the same death which he meted out to her husband.

Favara recently was acquitted of the murder of Parisi when the jury determined he killed in self-defense.

The verdict apparently did not satisfy Mrs. Parisi. So police say, with her babe in her arms, Mrs. Parisi laid in wait for Favara.

As Favara was leading a Cherry street address a shot was fired. It went wild. Mrs. Parisi was standing nearby.

An officer grabbed her, took from her a smoking pistol and led the woman, with her child in her arms, to a jail cell.

Now another jury and a formal trial will supplant the ancient law—"an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth."

CROWDS PLEASED BY REVIVAL HERE

Much Interest in Sermons of Evangelist at First Baptist Church.

The crowd at the Baptist revival meeting last night was almost as large as the one Sunday evening. The house was filled and a great many chairs were used in the aisles. The service started off with a hymn when the large chorus choir under the direction of Mr. Randall began to sing. He has a pleasing way of getting people to sing.

Dr. Crutcher preached last night on the subject, "Prepare to meet thy God." "When we are to meet any one we are always anxious to know it in advance," declared the speaker, "and we may avoid meeting others but there is one whom we must meet. We need to be prepared to meet death when it comes. Every man will have to meet death. Sometimes we hear a man say that he has to make a living but he doesn't. We don't have to live but we do have to die. And then there is that which is coming out yonder after death for the Bible says, 'It is appointed unto man once to die and after that the judgment.'"

The speaker then launched into the tragedy of a man putting the matter by saying that the time to prepare to meet God is now. "Behold today is the day of salvation." It was a great message. We are hearing many comments on the manner of the delivery of the preacher. He is a most pleasing speaker and his messages are greatly enjoyed by those who have had the privilege of hearing him.

The service this morning was well attended. The speaker used for his subject, "Walking with Jesus." The attendance was fine and the message was great. He emphasized the importance of the Christian being careful of his or her walk if they are going to be greatly used in bringing others to Christ.

The service this evening will begin at 7:45. The subject of the sermon will be "A Moral Man in Hell." Mr. Randall will sing a song with a great deal of local interest attached to it on account of the fact that it was written under the impulse of a story told by Rev. C. C. Morris while in the meeting at Bristow recently. A young man in Ada was dying and told Brother

COLLEGE BAND PLANS CONCERT PROGRAM HERE

The East Central College band will give a home concert at the McSwain Theatre March 22 after their successful tour over the entire district.

Owing to the success of the tour and the reception given the band at every town visited in the district, those in charge have deemed it advisable to make their success complete with a concert here.

The band has made an enviable mark in the achievements of the local college and has been accepted everywhere as one of the best musical organizations on tour in the state.

The band, under the direction of Professor Fentem, is composed of 20 numbers.

The concert here will be sponsored by the chamber of commerce to go toward defraying the expenses of the band on their tour.

Construction on Memorial Building Under Full Swing

With the return of fair and warmer weather work on the convention hall is proceeding with a rush. The recent cold weather made it inadvisable to pour concrete, but today the force is putting down the concrete floor. This is one of the most particular features of the work and when it is finished the contractors will have the way clear to go ahead with the brick work on the walls and they anticipate rapid progress from this time on.

A good supply of brick, stone and steel is on the ground ready for use. With the approach of spring it is expected that all phases of the construction will go forward rapidly and the structure pushed to completion.

FIVE PLANES OF FLIGHT LAND AT MIAMI, FLA.

(By the Associated Press)
MIAMI, Fla., March 7.—Five of the six De-Haviland army planes enroute from San Antonio, Texas, to Porto Rico, arrived at Curtiss Field near this city at 11:55 this morning.

What had become of the sixth plane the officers were unable to say. They expressed the opinion that it had either turned back after passing San Augustine or had been obliged to make a forced landing.

Half as many babies, over one year old, dies as 20 years ago.

Forgotten?

More than a score of flag poles pierce the sky atop the buildings of our town. Not many months ago it was the proud duty of these shafts of wood and steel to bear aloft the wind tossed folds of Old Glory, the most beautiful flag in the world. Beautiful to look upon; beautiful to think upon because of memories of its defenders in its red, the peace of its white and the hope of its blue.

Today, only a few tattered shreds of faded cloth or twisted rope blow wildly in the breeze—phantoms where once was glory. The memories of war are still fresh in our minds; wounds of flesh and heart are still unhealed, the tears yet hardly dry. Surely, we are not forgetting.

When war stalked abroad the flag inspired the nation to tasks undreamed and victory was the reward. But recently from foreign shores has it returned again to the home land. War torn Europe bade it a regretful adieu and even a conquered foe, forgetting the sting of defeat in its beneficent shadow, learned to love and respect it.

In these peace times, were it to fly again from these bare poles, would it not still inspire us the better to perform our daily tasks? It should have a deeper significance; it should be thrice sacred now. Its message should still be heard by its people and its people should ever keep it aloft that rising generations might learn, while still in youth, the ideals for which it stands.

FLY THE FLAG AND KEEP IT FLYING.

OFFICERS SEARCH FOR RIOT LEADERS

Prisoner Escapes From Law
by Leaping From Train Near Oklahoma City.

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 7.—Federal, county and city authorities are searching Oklahoma City and surrounding country for Henry Garrett, alleged leader of the "terror squad" of the railroad shop strikers at Shawnee, who made a sensational escape from Sheriff Butler by leaping from a moving train on the outskirts of the city last night as he was being taken to Shawnee to face trial for a series of outrages.

Officers allege that it was at meetings held in Garrett's barn that plans were laid for bridge burnings, attacks on the railroad shops, bombing the homes of men who had taken the places of the strikers and other forms of violence. A reward of $250 for Garrett's capture has been posted by Sheriff Butler.

Garrett, according to the sheriff, declared he was ready to make a clean breast of his part in the outrages, and said he would tell what "those committemen told us that we had to do and how we were driven into it by the committemen."

Seventeen men are held in connection with the cases, including Roy Hendrickson. Three have already pleaded guilty to charges of rioting and received sentences of five years each.

SHAWNEE, March 7.—Federal authorities report the arrest of Homer Rule on charges of rioting in connection with the strike troubles here, bringing the total number of men in custody in connection with the case up to 17.

The search for Henry Garrett, alleged leader of the "terror squad," was continuing.

Erwin Acquitted on Arson Charge by Lawton Court

(By the Associated Press)

LAWTON, Okla., March 7.—Rev. Thomas J. Erwin, former pastor of the Presbyterian church here, was acquitted of a charge of arson in an instructed verdict in district court late yesterday. The charge grew out of a fire in Rev. Erwin's church in August 1922.

When the testimony had been introduced by County Attorney Riley counsel for the defense demanded to the sufficiency of the evidence and was sustained by the court. The judge then instructed the jury to find the defendant not guilty.

DRESS-REHEARSAL HELD FOR OPERETTA NUMBER

Final dress rehearsal was held today by the high school students presenting the operetta, "Treasure Hunters," in preparation for the presentation Thursday night at the McSwain theatre.

Principal characters as well as chorus members have been undergoing a thorough preparation for the operetta.

The operetta is being presented under the direction of Miss Inez Donaldson.

PRETTY MISS DOESN'T SCARE WUTH A DARN AND POOR GUNMAN GETS 20 YEARS IN PEN

Gussie Halberg.

Gussie Halberg, seventeen-year-old Cleveland bookkeeper, was slugged and robbed on busy Euclid avenue by a pair of gunmen. But she wasn't scared, that is not too scared to note every detail of her assailants' appearance. In court there she identified Anthony O'Callahan as one of the thugs and it netted O'Callahan just twenty years in Ohio's bastille in Columbus.

WESTERN UNION CLOSES BUSINESS CONFERENCE

Viewing their two-day business conference as a great benefit to their business transactions in connection with the management of their offices, Western Union managers closed their conference here last night with short addresses by all members present.

The principal address of the evening was delivered by Mr. Pringle, district manager of Dallas. Other addresses by high officials were delivered during the evening. Managers of small town offices in the Western Union Telegraph company service gathered here Monday for a two day conference for the discussion of business matters important in the management of small town offices.

Various problems pointing toward the relation with the public in the use of telegraph service were discussed by prominent authorities.

The visitors were entertained with a dance at the Harris hotel following the adjournment of the meeting.

Witnesses Testify Before Grand Jury on Bastrop Action

(By the Associated Press)

BASTROP, La., March 7.—Fourteen witnesses have been summoned to appear before the grand jury today to testify concerning the masked band activities, particularly the kidnapping and murder of Daniels and Richards which is laid at the door of the Ku Klux by state officers.

Twelve persons called today as witnesses testified at the open hearing here in January concerning the kidnapping on August 24 of five men including Daniels and Richards on the Bastrop and Mer Rouge highway.

Miss Ada Mae Hamilton, 17, warned by a masked band to leave her home under penalty of being tarred and feathered, and her mother were among the witnesses to be questioned today.

BAPTISTS ASSEMBLE FOR TWO-DAY CONFERENCE

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 7.—Three hundred Baptists from all parts of the state gathered for a two-day convention at which missionary work will be discussed.

Among the speakers are Dr. W. H. Winburn, Dr. O. E. Brown and J. P. Henderson.

CASE OF BROKER MURDER GIVEN TO NEW YORK JURY

(By the Associated Press)

NEW YORK, March 7.—The case against Mrs. Paulette Saludes, charged with the murder of Martellieres, the broker whom she claims betrayed and fleeced her and then cast her off, was given to the jury today. Judge Koenig read a charge of 60 pages in which he urged the jury to "try the case with their heads and not their hearts."

BODIES OF MEN FOUND IN MIRE AFTER KILLING

Deputy Sheriffs Slain and Buried in Mud Hole by Moonshiners.

BODIES MUTILATED

Slayers Rounded up When
Posse Searches Woods
After Murder.

(By the Associated Press)

FRANKLINTON, La., March 7.—The bodies of Wesley Crain and Wiley Pierce, deputy sheriffs, slain Saturday by moonshiners, were found today buried in mud in which they had been pressed down and then further concealed by the carcass of a cow dragged over the spot. They were found about half a mile from a destroyed moonshine still in a swamp eight miles from here.

The slayers, John Murphy and Gideon Rester, moonshiners, confessed and led the officers to the burial spot, it was announced by District Judge Prentiss Clark.

They had been previously rounded up with 19 others and placed in jail by a posse of 800 armed men who had beaten the woods and swamps for several days. The bodies were found a few feet from where they had been shot and the marks indicated that they had been pressed into the mud by the feet of the slayers. The body of Pierce was mutilated with an axe according to the authorities, who take this as an indication that it was first planned to dismember the bodies and dispose of them some way other than by burial.

According to the officers the men in confessing told how the deputies came to their home Saturday, raided their still and placed both under arrest. After searching them they started out of the swamp. Coming to a narrow lane the four walked in single file, Murphy, according to Judge Clark, said he pulled a pistol which he had concealed and killed Pierce. He then killed Crain and concealed the bodies.

FRANKLINTON, La., March 7.—Fifteen men have been deputed to guard the jail in which Murphy and Rester are held. Sheriff J. E. Bateman stated, however, that he did not fear mob violence.

The grand jury will be convened at once and the trial of the men will probably be started next week. The sheriff said the murder occurred early Saturday morning.

FRENCH OCCUPATION OF RUHR CAUSES TROUBLE

(By the Associated Press)

LONDON, March 7.—A Reuter's dispatch from Cologne, said to have been based on good authority, stated that France and Great Britain are still deadlocked on the question of permitting French troops to be transported across territories held by the British.

ESSEN, March 7.—In the absence of a police force new outrages are constantly reported, shops being looted and civilians slugged and robbed. The city firemen have taken over the duties of the police. The French will not permit them to carry arms, so they have equipped themselves with rubber hoses loaded with lead. The firemen have the active backing of the communists who appear anxious to show that they are not responsible for the disorders.

Books of Illinois Bank Being Checked by State Examiners

(By the Associated Press)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 7.—The work of checking up the books of the Springfield National bank proceeded today after the bank had closed its doors last night following the report of an alleged shortage of $600,000 in the Liberty bond account of the institution.

A. H. Penfield, cashier, who had charge of the Liberty bond account, according to the directors, was said to be recovering from an attempt at suicide made yesterday. No charge has been placed against Penfield by either the bank officials or the bank examiner, it was stated.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE GREAT VICTORY: If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body.—James 3:2.

THE END OF THE POLITICAL ROAD

Cuts of former Senator Culberson appearing in Texas papers, indicate a great change in the physique of the Texas statesman in recent years. His hair appears white and his face bears the marks left by the years that have fled since his entry into politics. Just what his financial resources are has not been stated, but it is seldom that a man who spends his life in honest public service accumulates much for his old age. When Senator Roger Q. Mills gave up the fight and retired to private life many years ago, about all he had was a mortgage on his home. Only a fortunate strike of oil on his premises made it possible for him to spend his last few years in comfort.

Culberson's political career began 32 years ago when he was elected attorney general of Texas. Four years later he was elected governor and having served as chief executive for four years, succeeded Roger Q. Mills to the senate when that eminent statesman displeased his constituents by his attitude on the silver question. The public forgot Mills' past services and would have defeated him had he not seen the handwriting on the wall and retired voluntarily. Now after a service of 24 years during which there has never been a hint of dishonor about his record, Culberson joins the ranks of has-beens.

Changes of this kind remind one of the scriptural reference to the pharaoh "who knew not Joseph." The younger generation remembers little of the most brilliant early careers of the older men. The younger men are eager to carve out careers for themselves and in politics this means crowding some one else out of his office. The political game is one of uncertainties and few indeed succeed in holding the favor of the public to the end. Too often the office holder is turned out after he has lost step with the procession and is not qualified for much of anything else. However, this fact does not deter young men from essaying a public career and attempting for a time to get into the spotlight of popular favor.

Charles W. Morse of New York is again in the toils of the federal court which recalls the fact that some years ago he was given a long term in the federal penitentiary and had to go to Atlanta in spite of all the influence his millions could command. However, shortly after his arrival his health failed—at least that is what the doctors said—and Mr. Daugherty of Ohio, now attorney general of the United States, assured President Taft that Morse had only a few weeks to live and begged that he be pardoned so that he could get home to die. Taft granted the petition but Morse did not die. Not a bit of it. He immediately got back into the game and when the war came on he found it a golden opportunity to add to his fortune. His activities brought another federal indictment and now the government is after him with all of its power in an endeavor to put him back behind the bars. It succeeds Morse will have to try some other dodge to get out for he recovered his health too readily to get away with it again.

The pump-gun volley fired into the flock of congressmen and senators by the voters last year left a whole bunch of lame ducks kicking about the pond. However, through the efficient service of the eminent surgeon, Dr. Harding, each hopes to be taken care of in a manner befitting the former high estate of said ducks before being plumped down among the lame ones. Some have already been given first aid and the surgeon will probably attend to other cases as soon as they can be reached.

The chief opposition to farm credits legislation has come from New England and New York. For years the farmers of the western states voted the Republican ticket and sent delegations to congress which fell in line to vote a high tariff for the Eastern manufacturers. Now when the farmers ask for something they find themselves opposed by the very bunch they helped to make rich through special legislation. By this time the western farmers must know where their real friends as well as their enemies live.

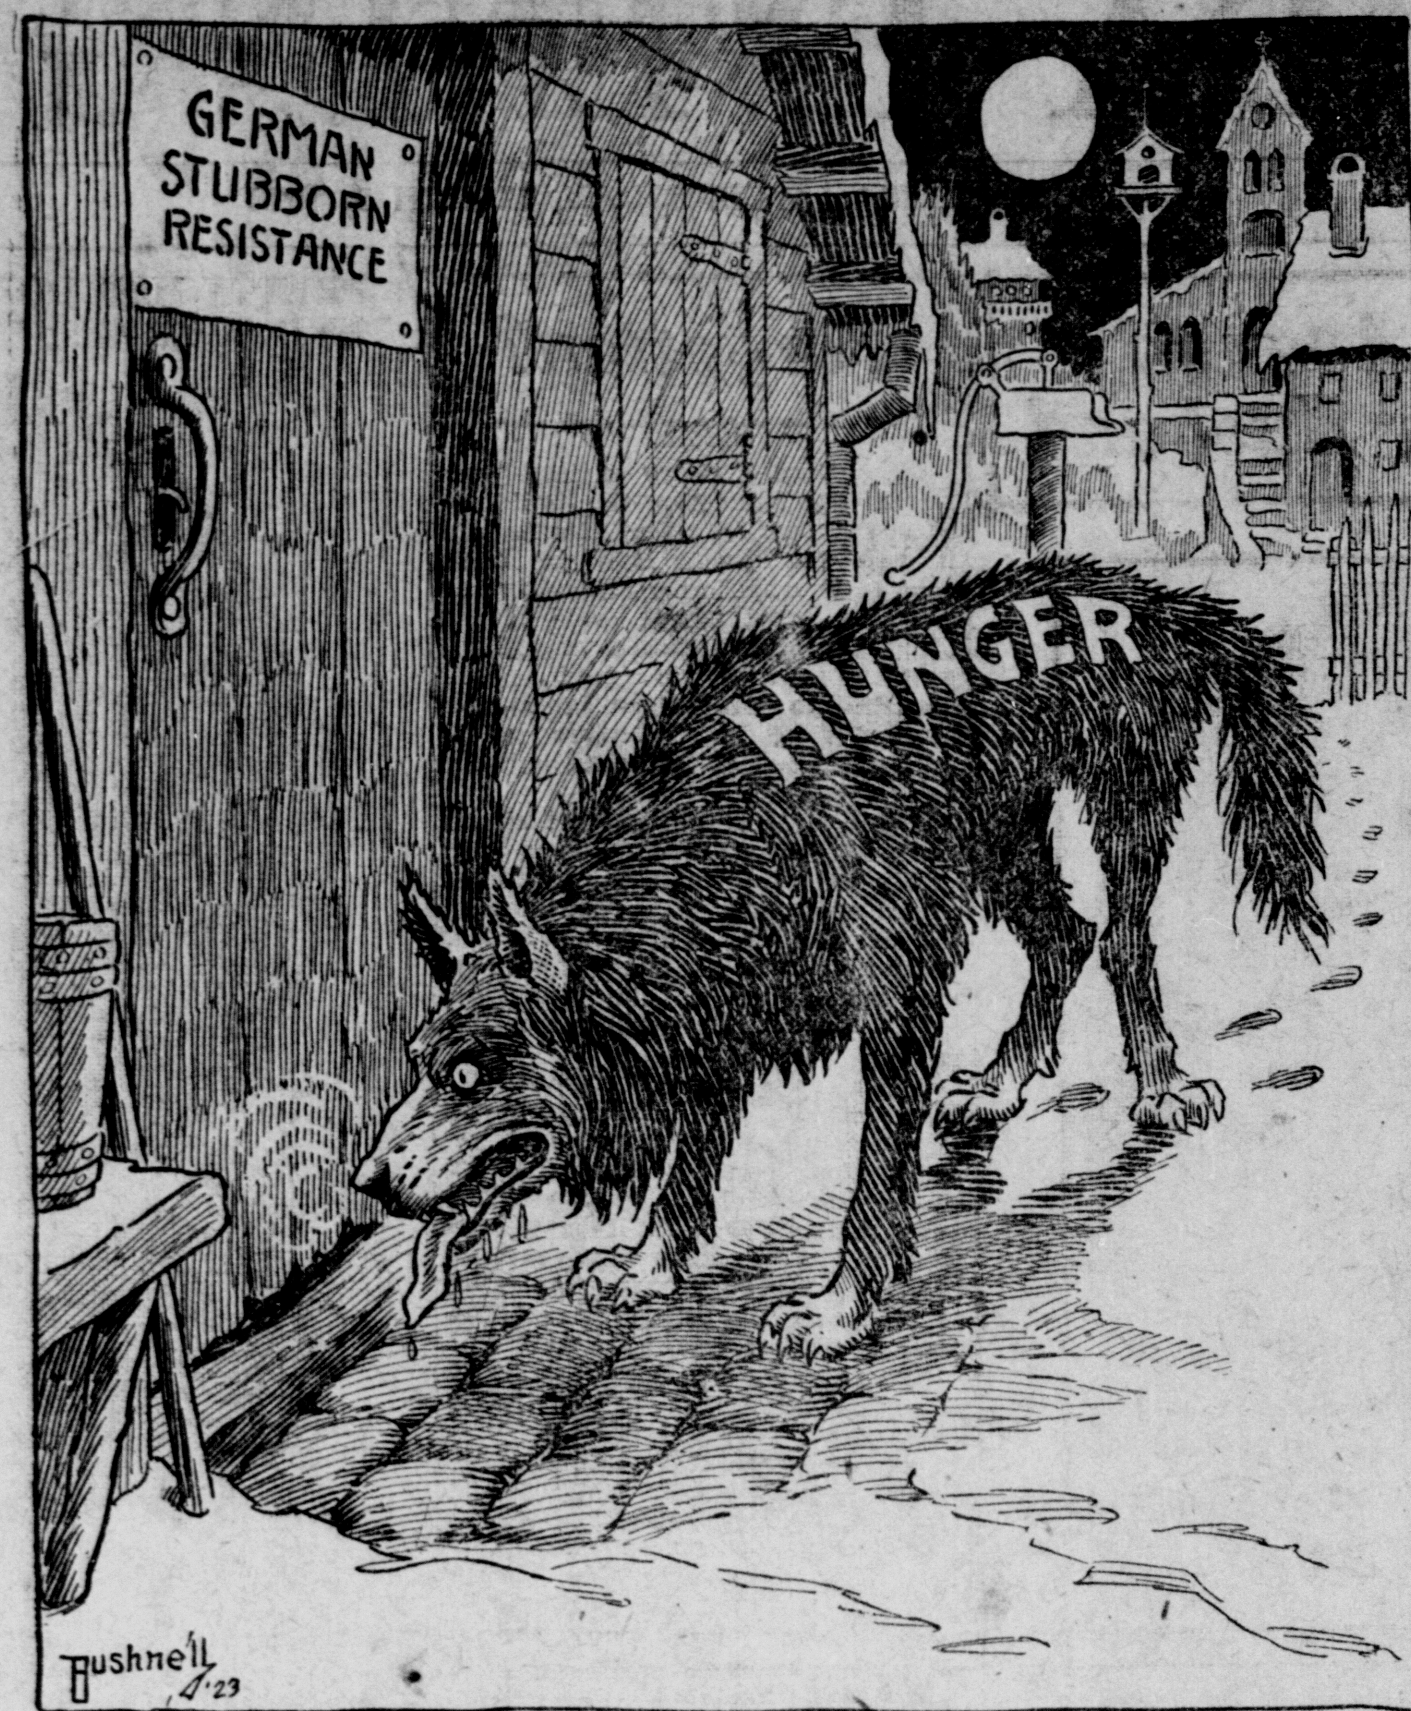

Sometime ago an inventor claimed to have perfected a machine that would indicate whether or not a man was telling the truth. Now he is under indictment for trying to work a fraud and the machine may be used to read his mind and find out if he is telling the truth or if it is all just a windy. Bring on the lie detector.

The French continue to widen the bounds of the territory occupied by them in Germany. At the present rate it will be a matter of time until the entire nation is occupied and garrisoned.

In the dim and almost forgotten past we heard some one say that a wise man changes his mind and a fool never does. Well, we'll have to admit President Harding changes his mind.

Let a NEWS WANT AD get it for you.

"Saying" the Farmer.

(American Legion Weekly)

Those selfish organizations behind the movement to throw open our gates to a flood of aliens are shrilly proclaiming that unrestricted immigration would prove the salvation of the American farmer. Were it true that those from overseas go to the farms, this contention might have some basis in fact. But, unfortunately it is not true. The new arrival in almost every case rushes to the cities and factory towns, where—since he represents "cheap labor"—he is hailed with delight by the so-called friends of our agriculturists. Of last year's entries, only two percent were farmers.

At present there are more than enough able-bodied workers in this country to care for our industries. There is, in fact, a surplus. A recent survey disclosed that we have, for instance, 200,000 more miners than we need. For a large part of the year these men and their brothers in other fields of labor are idle—through no fault of their own. This means waste. And waste must always be paid for by some one. Working or idle, our industrial workers and their families require food, clothes and shelter. They must get enough for their labor, when they are fortunate enough to be at work, to enable them to live through the rest of the year. This is elemental economics. Who pays? All of us; and the farmer is certainly not exempt, for he is buying goods for more than it should cost to produce them.

We must take care of those already within our gates. Until there is no longer a costly surplus of men and women who want to work but cannot, immigration should be absolutely prohibited. Until it is prohibited, industry will never make the proper use of the labor that is already available. And all of us—including the farmer—will continue to pay.

Pullman Names.

(Wall Street Journal)

For many years it was believed that Miss Florence Pullman, daughter of the founder of the Pullman company, received $1,550 or $100 for each car name. One solemn guess, quoted her salary at $30,000 a year but the truth is she named only a few cars and received no compensation therefor.

The first Pullman sleeping car day coach, No. 9 and it continued was a remodeled Chicago & Alton with its original designation. It was then decided to letter cars A, B, etc., but when 26 cars had been built numbering had to be resumed. This brought a conflict with railroad car numbers, so each car was given a baptismal name, as locomotives in the seventies were named, after railroad presidents, governors and senators.

The Pioneer was the first, names of women were used, then flowers, birds, cities, towns, rivers, lakes, soldiers, poets, battlefields and camps. The latest names have been taken from ancient history—Antiphon, Berosus, Hippocrates, Demosthenes, Diogenes, Hesiod and Socrates—and colored porters have no use for them, because they have difficulty in pronouncing them.

ADA GIRLS NAMED IN STATE AFFAIR

Three Ada Girls Represent City in Livestock Show at Oklahoma City.

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 7. — Miss Dorothy Hoffman of Oklahoma City will be queen at the coronation ball at the Southwest American Livestock show here March 11 to 17. It has been announced by the board of directors through John A. Whitehurst, president of the state board of agriculture and a director of the show.

More than 100 young women from cities scattered throughout the state have accepted the invitation of the show management to be present as representatives of their communities and members of the court of the queen. An inner court of sixteen maidens remains to be chosen by the ruler herself.

Court festivities will include, besides the coronation ball, a luncheon at the country club, and a rehearsal in the afternoon. Oklahoma agricultural and Mechanical college band will play the coronation march.

Included in the list of girls who have accepted invitations to attend the ball are the following: Miss Aliene Drake of Vinita, Miss Edna Hoffman of Kingfisher, Miss Gladys Ames of Kingfisher, Dorothy Duncan of Ada, Ione Phenix of Duncan, Helen Arnett of Guthrie, Lois Foreman of Duncan, Pauline Knotts and Mary Francis Case of Ada, Helen Montgomery of Bartlesville, Martha Starr of Vinita, Mary Davis Hill of Vinita, Betty Banker of Kingfisher, Jenny Carrol and Lucile Yeates of Vinita, Gladys and Mary Hayden of McAlester, Rudy Butts and Virginia Hancock of Muskogee, Helen Simpkins of Pawhuska and Myrtle Fowler of Duncan.

The manager of exhibits has reported, according to Whitehurst that enquiries for catalogues of the show indicate more than a statewide interest, having been received from Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, Kansas, Missouri, as well as Oklahoma. Entries from five states all those named except Missouri have been listed.

The sale program of the show will begin March 12 and continue until the closing day. A Hampshire swine sale will hold interest the first day, and following days have been designated as follows: March 13, Poland China swine sale, March 14, Angus cattle sale, March 15, Shorthorn cattle sale, March 16, Hereford cattle sale. Judging of exhibits will be under way at all times, according to the program.

W.C.T.U. OFFERS AID TO BROKEN

Welfare Homes Opened to Needy People in Many Cities of Country.

CHICAGO, March 7.—In a survey of its philanthropic work just made, the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union is devoting more than one hundred pieces of property in the United States to the comfort of women and children in an effort to aid in community welfare, according to a survey of its philanthropic work just completed.

The survey shows that fourteen states maintain homes for girls. Some of these are schools while several are voluntary rescue homes. There are community buildings in a number of states and about fifty Americanization centers over the country, the best known of these being the one in Bridgeport, Conn.

At San Diego, Calif., the W. C. T. U. maintains a home center for soldiers, sailors and marines. There is a Francis E. Willard home for girls in Los Angeles and at Highland Park a home for women and children. Oakland, Calif., also has a home for girls, Michigan with its two homes for girls is a close second to California while Iowa, New Mexico, Alabama, Indiana and Illinois also lead in this type of welfare work.

Four states have old ladies' homes and seven states maintain summer rest cottages. Many of the state and local union headquarters also serve their communities as Americanization, child welfare or social centers.

"Some of this property has been left to the W. C. T. U. through legacies but the larger part has been acquired by purchase made possible through gifts," said Miss Anna A. Gordon, world and national president of the organization.

"It has been our object to use our funds in establishing permanent useful memorials for daily helpfulness to our neighbors that we might carry out the wish expressed in the words of our great leader Frances E. Willard when she said, 'It is not enough that women should be the home-maker, but they must make the world itself a larger home.'"

OBITUARY

A Tribute

To the memory of our departed Comrade J. A. Morgan.

The passing of Comrade Morgan removes one from the ranks of the Old Soldiers in Gray.

Comrade Morgan was 82 years old and was a Christian and a loving husband and father. The bugle sounded and therefore, has taken one of our beloved Comrades in arms, worn out by the fatiguing labors of the day, and has retired from the battlefields of life to take his well earned rest in the silent peace of departed heroes.

We his surviving Comrades in arms and fellow citizens in time of peace, stand as sentinels to guard his memory until our own summons come.

HOLSTEIN COW AT COLLEGE SETS PRODUCTION RECORD

STILLWATER. — Rosa Segis Johanna, a Holstein cow which the dairy department of the A. and M. College bought last fall from a Wisconsin dairy farmer, has just completed an official production test in which she set a new high record for Oklahoma Holsteins.

The test was for a period of seven days—in reality, there were two seven-day tests, for when she completed the first record, her production was so phenomenally high that the rules of the Holstein association required a re-test through another seven days. During this first test, which ended February 21, Rosa produced 625.4 pounds of milk and 32,906 pounds of butter during the second test, ending February 28, she boosted her milk yield to 675.8 pounds but dropped, slightly, to 32,145 pounds in butter.

Rosa was just completing a year's test for three-year-olds when she arrived at the College last fall. Her yield that year, was 24,432 pounds of milk and 1,080.4 pounds of butter—eclipsing all former Oklahoma records. During the early part of her lactation period, however her highest seven day butter yield had been 30.8 pounds, so that she seems started on a still higher record for the present year.

In the recent seven-day tests, Rosa's record was made February 23 when she produced 95.5 pounds of milk and 5.3 pounds of butter, her largest amount of milk in a single day was 102.5 pounds, or approximately twelve gallons.

Rosa is being milked four times a day—at 5 a. m., 11 a. m., 5 p. m. and 11 p. m.—Oran Stipe of McAlester, a student in dairying doing the milking by hand. To produce that quantity of milk she has been consuming daily 22 pounds of alfalfa hay, 20 pounds of ensilage, and 31 pounds of grain mixture, in addition to an hour's run on rye pasture.

When she became fresh, February 3, she produced a heifer calf for which her former owner has telegraphed an offer of $1,000. The offer has been rejected.

OIL NEWS

Ollie Lancaster returned Tuesday night from Tulsa where he went in the interests of the oil fields of this county. He says the people of Tulsa have their eye on Pontotoc County, and the summary of the oil development in last Sunday's News is causing much favorable comment. Mr. Lancaster is a great believer in the local fields and is doing all he can to develop them.

Eddie L. Battaille, who is in charge of the Smith-Lee Oil & Gas Company's operations in the Francis fields, was in Ada Tuesday. He is optimistic over the outlook in that territory. Mr. Battaille will be remembered by many citizens of Ada as one of the main players on the Durant Normal football team a few years ago. He still delights in telling how they used to smash the Ada lines.

Dr. C. M. Means of Allen was in Ada Tuesday, looking after business affairs. Dr. Means believes a great revival of drilling will soon take place in the Allen oil fields.

COOPER FINDS EASY VICTIM AT ANTLERS

Arche Cooper added another scalp to his string of victories Monday night when he obtained a technical knockout over Case of Ardmore at Antlers.

Cooper took an easy gait and played with his opponent during the four rounds of the bout. A terrific left jab sent in by Cooper in the first round broke Case's nose. His next two rounds were sent in for body punishment and in the fourth round heavy blows suffered Cooper's opponent two broken ribs. Case did not show for the next round.

Case had been highly touted and was considered a hard opponent for Cooper. He outweighed the local fighter 25 pounds.

A bout between Claude Sparks and his contender at Hugo was called off because of heavy rains. Sparks fought a three-round exhibition with an Antlers fighter.

Cooper will be matched here for a bout within the next two weeks. A. R. Dixon, local promoter, stated that several prospects were under consideration.

Case, although beaten and suffering from injuries inflicted by Cooper, showed a superior gameness and stayed until the fifth round when the broken ribs forced him to abandon the fight.

DEFENSE ATTORNEYS CLAIM VICTORY IN HERRIN CASE

MARION, ILL., March 7.—Attorneys for the defendants in the second Herrin riot trial claimed an important victory today in a ruling by Judge Hartwell regarding testimony directed against Bert Grace, one of the defendants charged with the murder of Antonion Mulkovich. ## NEW DEVICE ON PLANES USEFUL Pilot Aided for Safety at High Altitude by New Device.

(By the Associated Press)

RANTOUL, ILL., March 7.—The bank, turn and climb indicator, recently invented and perfected by the personnel of McCook Field at Dayton, Ohio, is hailed by army air service officers at Chanute Field here as safeguarding cloud flying about ninety per cent. It is described by these officers as an instrument so designed as to let the pilot know instantly of any climb, bank, turn or skid his plane is making and the degree of same, being operated by two gyroscopes which are run by the rush of air past the plane.

The Chanute officers state that the most forceful instance of its value in aerial navigation was recently demonstrated in the Airways Mission of Lieutenant A. G. Hamilton, of Chanute Field, flying a De Havilland plane which was not equipped with the indicator, and Lieutenant C. H. Ridenour, of McCook Field, also flying a De Havilland plane which had been equipped with the indicator. Lt. Hamilton left Chanute Field for Mitchell Field (via McCook and Washington, at McCook Field he was joined by Lt. Ridenour.

About thirty-five miles east of Mountsboro, W. Va., while flying at an altitude of twenty-six hundred feet, they encountered the mountains, the peaks of which penetrated dense banks of clouds. As both pilots were equipped with parachutes, they determined to try to make their way through the cloud bank rather than turn back. On entering the clouds they lost sight of each other. They climbed through five thousand feet of clouds, and on emerging into clear blue sky again, Lt. Hamilton was unable to locate Lt. Ridenour. He set a compass course for Washington and landed sixty-five miles north of there, while Lt. Ridenour flew a perfect course and landed at Washington.

This would have been almost impossible if his plane had not been equipped with the bank, climb and turn indicator, according to these officers.

"I do mean it!" exclaimed Mr. Lambe warmly. "Miss Berners, from the first hour I saw you, I was convinced of your—your essential goodness! It betrays itself in all that you do. Anything that is underhand or questionable, glides away from you—proclaimed Mr. Lambe, with a sweeping movement of his hand, "as the turbid stream flows over the riverbed of white marble, leaving its purity unscathed. My admiration for you is greater, if that is possible, than ever."

Georgina's heart fluttered delightfully. "I think," continued Alexander, with growing enthusiasm, "that you exist to sacrifice yourself for others, Miss Berners. You have more than plenty—you have charity. It is one of the sweetest qualities in a woman."

Georgina turned to him with swimming eyes. "Oh, Mr. Lambe!" she murmured with delicious confusion.

Alexander answered her with a hollow groan. She was startled at the sudden distress in his face.

"The question is not what I think of you," he said bitterly, "but what you think of me! You know the principles I profess, and that I impress on you. Out of my own mouth I am condemned. How can you feel anything but contempt for me! I have consented to connive at this mad escapade of Aimee's and all its consequences. To keep silent. To—to bolster it up," he said with a gulp. "I have passed my word."

Georgina's eyes shone. "You have done that!" she cried eagerly. "Why, now that you are on her side, she may be saved from exposure after all! I think it is splendid of you—absolutely splendid!"

"How can you think of me, but as a hypocrite? You do not mean, Miss Berners, that you feel any respect for me now?"

"Mr. Lambe, when I first knew you, I thought you my ideal as a churchman. I think so more than ever. When I was in trouble, and consulted you, I seemed to find you a little hard. Poor Aimee had enough to bear. But now," gasped Georgina, quite carried away, "I consider your conduct noble—really noble! I admire you more than ever."

"Miss Berners," said Alexander, husky with emotion, "if only you knew what a relief it is, that I have not forfeited your regard! I have only known you a few days, but your kindness, your sympathy—" his hand closed almost convulsively on hers—"Miss Berners, may I call you Aimee—I mean Georgina—"

"Poof!"

A stifled, explosive sound caused Mr. Lambe to start violently and look round him.

"What was that? A dog?" he said confusedly.

Georgina, pink to the ears, had risen to her feet; her eyes shone somewhat viciously.

"It sounded to me more like a cat!" she said in acid tones, and walked away down the path.

Mr. Lambe followed her. When they were out of sight, the parlor maid emerged from the little arbor, her face crimson, her shoulders shaking, a handkerchief pressed to her streaming eyes.

"Poor old Georgie!" she gasped. "I couldn't help it. I should have burst in another minute."

She squeezed the handkerchief and controlled her emotion.

"They'll have a jolly old tangle to unpack, too, when Aunt knows!" she said thoughtfully.

"No use stopping here. I suppose I'd better finish my dusting."

Aimee made a circuitous journey to the deserted drawing room, and dusted with the energy of a high-power machine. The room was not much the better for it. She was only just in time, for the housekeeper appeared.

Scotland Having Trouble Meeting Costs of Whiskey

(By the Associated Press)

GLASGOW.—The high cost of whisky in these hard reconstruction times, caused partly by the heavy demand for their national beverage in the Bahamas and points west, is forcing Scotch drinkers into the anomalous necessity of resorting to a cheap substitute made of methylated spirits, known to the local trade as "finish."

A police report just issued says several persons have been reduced to human wrecks in a very short time by indulgence in this dope. Scores of even mild drinkers have been found completely incapacitated from the effects of it.

Hardened drinkers have found a most satisfying "wallow" in the new concoction, but for the ordinary temperate drinker its effects have proved far too deadly to recommend it as an agreeable tipple.

However, in order to preserve a moderate "kick" in their beverage at a minimum cost, Scotchmen and after some sour comments, stood by her while she did a good deal of the work over again. Then Aimee was marshaled into the library, to dust that.

The library overlooked the path leading to the garage. It was some forty minutes later that Aimee caught sight of the chauffeur approaching. She flung down her duster and ran to the window, giving a cautious whistle, as a poacher who calls his dog.

Billy made sure that the coast was clear, and came to her window. He looked at her and laughed joyously. "The clouds have rolled by, partner!" he said.

"What has happened? Have you seen Alexander?"

"Sure. Just had a pow-wow with him in the garage."

"What did he say to you?" asked Aimee quickly.

Billy eyed her thoughtfully. "Never you mind. The game's square. The padre's all wool and a yard wide. You're all right now. Unless—"

"But the police! Suppose they trace us and come back here?"

"They may not. I believe I see a way through it. And I've all the time off, this evening. You sit tight."

"But if they come here!"

"Then they'll get me," said Billy, "but they won't get you; you're safe from the cops, anyhow. I promise you that."

Aimee leaned out of the window, with flushed cheeks, and caught his hands in hers.

"Billy," she said breathlessly, "how good you've been to me. How good you've been! I want—"

"I'd be flayed alive for you!" said Billy suddenly. "There isn't anything I wouldn't do—and I've done nothing, yet. You've got the grit of twenty."

He held her hands tight in his. "Aimee—"

"Oh! Look out!" exclaimed Aimee, darting back. There was a heavy step on the gravel and Mr. Tarbeaux came round the corner. Billy walked briskly forward.

Mr. Tarbeaux bent a suspicious and accusing eye upon him.

CHAPTER XVII

Complications.

"Either you are working too hard, Alexander," said Lady Erythea, inspecting her nephew through her lorgnette, as they rose from the luncheon table, "or the burglary, has been a greater shock to your nerves than I should have suspected. I do not like to see you wearing that pallid and constrained expression. Your sister will be quite concerned about you. She arrives, you remember, by the evening train."

"Diana," said Mr. Lambe. "I had quite forgotten that she was due here."

Georgina started slightly, and looked perturbed.

"She is coming," said Lady Erythea, "to investigate the Jervaux ghost. Certainly, she might have done it before. But I believe she has only recently become a member of the Psychical Research society. She is quite enthusiastic about it—so far as Diana can be enthusiastic about anything. Indeed, her letter is so technical as to be unintelligible to me."

"I did not know there was a ghost here," said Georgina, wide-eyed.

"I should not like to say that there is. But it is a tradition in the family, and has been well vouched for. I have never seen it. Diana seems to imply," added Lady Erythea a little acidly, "that only those who are advanced, and in tune with the infinite, see such things. If she thinks she is more spiritual than I, she is welcome to try. She will discover nothing whatever."

Lady Erythea turned to her nephew. "Bertrand de Jussac is coming alone."

"De Jussac?" cried Alexander, staring at her.

"Yes. You know him, I think."

"I have met him, of course," said Mr. Lambe dryly. "I should have thought this was the last house that so frivolous a person would wish to visit. Why is he coming? Surely he is not interested in the ghost?"

"In the ghost—no," said Lady Erythea, with a faint yet serene smile, "but possibly his interest may arise. I approve him. A young man of excellent standing and irreproachable descent."

"Descent is the word," said Mr. Lambe rather curtly, and left the room.

"How long is—Diana going to stay here?" Georgina asked anxiously.

"Two days—but it is possible she may be persuaded to prolong her visit," said her ladyship placidly.

"What is the Vicomte de Jussac like?"

"D'Artagnan—in the flesh. With a touch, perhaps, of Porthos. The type which it is a good woman's mission to reform. But this is outside your province, Aimee," she said abruptly, and laid a hand on the girl's shoulder.

"Go, my dear child, and get your cousin away from his books. Take him for a drive and some fresh air."

Georgina left the room obediently. But instead of seeking Alexander, she hunted, with an agitated face, for Aimee.

"Hullo! What's the trouble now?" exclaimed Aimee. "I say, Georgie, dear, I'm beastly sorry about being in the arbor. I couldn't help—"

"Oh, never mind that now!" broke in Georgina distractedly. "A much worse thing's happened. I knew how it would be. Lady Diana Lambe is coming; she'll be here in an hour or two."

Rapidly she repeated the news concerning the two expected guests. Aimee received it with consternation. "Cold Lambe!" she exclaimed.

and after some sour comments, stood by her while she did a good deal of the work over again. Then Aimee was marshaled into the library, to dust that.

The library overlooked the path leading to the garage. It was some forty minutes later that Aimee caught sight of the chauffeur approaching. She flung down her duster and ran to the window, giving a cautious whistle, as a poacher who calls his dog.

Aimee leaned out of the window, with flushed cheeks, and caught his hands in hers.

"Coming here? As if I hadn't enough to bear about that! It's the worst news yet."

"What did you call her?"

"It's what everybody calls her in London—Cold Lambe. It fits her like a glove. A beautiful, frigid beast!"

"Aimee! She knows you, doesn't she?"

"Of course. She lives in town. She's the only one of the Lambes I do know. And Diana hates me, and—well, I've never pretended to like her, either. She's perfectly pitiless; she'll give me away like a shot, and flatten me out. She'll be all over it!"

"Let us hope," said Georgina breathlessly, "that Monsieur de Jussac will er—distract her attention; keep her occupied. Lady Erythea says—"

Aimee sat on the bed, and exploded with laughter.

"That aunt of mine is incorrigible!" she gasped. "I tell you it's perfect rot. You might as well try to melt an iceberg fresh from the Pole. This French vicomte won't stand the slightest chance."

"Do you know him, too?"

"I've heard of him. They say he's rather a—rip. I expect that means he's a good sort. But Diana—heaven preserve us! Well, she probably won't know me in this rig, but she'll know you're the wrong horse. And then zizz! boom!—up we all go in the air! You and Billy, and me—and Alexander!"

Georgina sat down and pressed her hand to her forehead.

"Aimee," she said faintly, "the burglary, and all the rest of it, has upset me. I don't feel well. I—I have headache, and I can't come down to dinner. I shall go to bed."

"What a trump you are!" said Aimee, kissing her with intense affection. "It's the very thing. I'm so sorry, Georgie. It'll be beastly dull for you in bed, dear."

"I shall like a little dullness," said Georgina pathetically, as she left the room. "It will be restful. Goodbye, dear. You will have to keep out of Diana's way as best you can."

"I'll take jolly good care I do," murmured Aimee fervently, as she put her cap straight. "Even Billy can't help this time!"

CHAPTER XVIII

"Cold Lambe!"

Lady Diana might have been the original of that tedious young woman who was described by the poet as "divinely tall and most divinely fair." She was without doubt strikingly beautiful, a type of the large and very pale blonde. But an atmosphere of frigidity surrounded her, which many people found repellent.

"My dear aunt," she said calmly, entering the drawing room and kissing Lady Erythea, "so good of you to have me for this flying visit. Alexander, how are you?" She touched her brother's cheek with her lips.

"You will have a clear field for your investigations, my dear," said Lady Erythea, "and I hope the advances you have made in psychic science will—ah—bring you to terms with the ghost. But I doubt it. By the way, your cousin Aimee is here, as I told you. But she is unwell and is keeping her room. I am rather anxious about her. Incidentally, we shall have another guest; I expect Monsieur de Jussac today."

"Monsieur de Jussac!" exclaimed Diana. She paused. Lady Erythea watched her somewhat keenly. "What brings him here?" said Diana.

"He is very anxious," said Lady Erythea glibly, "to examine the Lambe collection of armor. We have a suit of mail which is believed to have been captured at Crecy; there is a tradition that it belonged to one of the De Jussac family."

Lady Diana looked incredulous.

"And I understand he is interested in psychic matters, and anxious to improve his knowledge."

"That is something in his favor," said Diana with suspicion.

"I expect that is his car," said Lady Erythea.

A redish automobile of semi-racing type was observed sweeping along the park drive. The Vicomte de Jussac had motored direct from town.

A minute later he presented himself. Bertrand de Jussac was tall, and for his age, rather full-bodied. His complexion was healthily ruddy, he had a little black mustache and a jolly, roving dark eye. In spite of his very material appearance, he had undoubtedly the bel air. He raised Lady Erythea's skinny fingers to his lips.

"Enchanted, dear lady, to pay homage to you sur vos terres. How very amiable of you to invite me."

Lady Erythea bestowed on him the smile she reserved for elder sons. "Charming to have you. You know my niece, surely?"

Bertrand's little start of surprise was admirably done. He bent low over Diana's hand, but refrained from kissing it.

"But this is delightful!" exclaimed Bertrand. "You told me in town, Lady Diana, that you were interested in the ghost. Happy ghost! I, too, am developing rapidly an interest in the psychic. I hope—"

"I thought it was armor that attracted you here," said Diana frigidly.

"Helas, mademoiselle," said Bertrand, allowing his dark eyes to meet her pale blue ones, "there are weapons against which armor is of no avail."

"With your bent for ancient history, Diana," interrupted her aunt, "you should know more of the Lambe armor than I do. Why not show it to Monsieur de Jussac, so that he may commence his studies. You will find most of it in the hall."

"I think Monsieur de Jussac had better pursue his own investigations, for I shall be fully occupied with mine," said Diana, "and for the present I will retire to my room, if you will excuse me, Aunt."

She glided majestically through the doorway.

The Vicomte's eyes followed Diana's departure.

"Adorable blonde!" he mused. "The invincible phlegme britannique. But it is the icy, inaccessible peak that spurs the courage of the mountaineer."

He sat down and made himself particularly pleasant to Lady Erythea.

RED SOX PLAYERS HAVE WORN A PATH TO YANKEE PARK

Six former Red Sox stars who journeyed to New York via the trade or purchase route. Left to right, above, Babe Ruth, Joe Bush and Wally Schang. Below, Waite Hoyte, Duffy Lewis and Carl Mays.

By Norman E. Brown

There's a long, long trail winding—from the Red Sox park to Ewing town to the Yankees' park in New York. And the sod is well trampled along that trail. For, since Harry Frazee obtained a lien on the Red Sox club and started selling it body and soul to the Yankees seventeen players have made the trip from Beantown to Gotham. Herb Pennock was the seventeenth man.

The Red Sox had won the world's series of 1918 and were sitting quite pretty for the 1919 campaign when Frazee started wrecking the club. He let Duffy Lewis, veteran but sweet outfielder; Pitcher Ernie Schang, Waite Hoyte, McNally and Harper. A pennant-winning battery, a crack infielder and a good pitcher obtained in one deal.

Last season the famous Joe Bush-Sam Jones deal was put over, Huggins sending Peckinpaugh, Quinn, Collins and Piercy for them.

Not content with the ruin wrought, Frazee let Joe Dugan and Elmer Smith go for Fewster, Miller, O'Doul and Mitchell and then Al De Vornier was sent to the Sox for Piggas and Hendricks.

Huggins gave Murray, McMillan and Skinner for Pennock—the only fair trade pulled off in the list of deals between the two clubs.

Indian History Preserved Through Relics Obtained Oklahoma Historical Club

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 5. — With recent additions to the Indian display at the state historical society hall, the state is rapidly putting together a complete picture of frontier days in Oklahoma and Indian Territory which will rival anything of its sort in the country. The display includes many documents, relics, and other articles of historical interest.

One of the recent additions to the museum display, according to Mrs. Czarina C. Conlan, supervisor of the Indian department, is a complete file of letters written in 1828-40 by John Rose, methodical chief of the Cherokee tribe, while his people were engaged in their migration from Georgia to Indian Territory. He preserved copies of all his correspondence.

Mrs. Conlan is herself, half Indian, one-fourth Chickashaw and one-fourth Choctaw, descended from the Colbert and Folsom families of those tribes and she has a fund of knowledge of Indian history and a wide acquaintance among the tribesmen.

A love affair between John Howard Paine, author of "Home, Sweet Home," and an Indian princess, ended by her elopement with a Cherokee drave, is revealed in one of the letters. It was written by Paine to Chief John Ross, whose daughter was the heroine of the affair. Ross favored Paine's suit, so the story goes, but the girl and her Cherokee lover eloped from their village and were married after a fourteen mile walk to a white missionary's residence.

A letter written in French by Thomas Jefferson to several Indian tribes in western Oklahoma, including the Otoes, is regarded by Mrs. Conlan as her principal find. It was loaned to the society by Chief Shuntoni of Pawnee, who had it from his grandfather Shuntoni, head chief of the Otoe Indians. The present Shuntoni refused $500 for the letter, offered by the Smithsonian institute, and other offers were also refused, including one to send his son to any college he wished. The chief sent the son to Tulsa university at his own expense and deposited the letter here.

Many Relics in Collection

A legal document written by Abraham Lincoln, in connection with a law suit tried in St. Louis, was given to the secretary by Charles Grimes of Tulsa, according to the report.

A silver medal given to Paddy Carr of the Creek tribe by President John Quincy Adams, in 1825, for services as interpreter, is in the collection.

Two Cheyenne pipes of peace in the collection reveal stories of patriotism and pathos in the manner of their addition to the list. One was owned by John Otterby, who, in his young manhood, was a scout for the army. When the world war came he was too old to enlist and had no son to send, so he gave his pipe to the Red Cross to be sold as his gift. It was purchased for $100 by a Clinton banker who loaned it to the society.

The late Chief Little Wolf possessed the other pipe. When Mrs. Conlan went to see him he was very near death, she says in her report. "When I saw his condition I felt that I should not say anything about my mission and leave as soon as possible," she wrote.

"But young Otterby said that if I did not say something he might think it was curiosity that brought me there. So, under these circumstances, I told him in a few words as possible the object of my visit, was to obtain something personal of his that I could put in the museum and get the assistance of him and his people to perpetuate the history of his tribe."

"I shall never forget the experience. Little Wolf was out in a large tepee with some of his friends around him. He raised up on his elbow, his eyes glistening with a raging fever, and said: 'I know what you mean. I have been in Washington three times. Then he said something to his wife in his own language and in a few minutes he handed him his pipe of peace. Then he said to me: 'Take this pipe. I may never smoke it again. And it was true, for in five days Little Wolf had gone to his happy hunting grounds.'

The gift had many results. Mrs. Conlan reported. Following the example of their dign chief, the Cheyennes filled her motor car with gifts of historical interest. Two ceremonial fans, one made from the tail feathers of the scissor bird, a Cheyenne saddle, a rope of buffalo hide more than 100 years old, bed protectors used to keep away evil spirits while the owner slept, tomahawk bags and pictures were among the gifts.

ROAD CONTRACTS TO BE LET SOON

Highway Projects for Five Counties in State to be Let.

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 5. — Road building contracts calling for the expenditure of approximately $500,000 on 42,602 miles of highway in Johnson, Pittsburg, Carter, Creek and Washington counties will be let at the state capitol March 14, according to Paul Nesbitt, state highway commissioner.

With the exception of 18,831 miles in Johnson county, divided between two projects which are to be awarded, the seven projects on which contracts are to be let at that time all call for "high type" roads, Nesbitt said. Two Pittsburg county projects call for a total of 13,802 miles of highway. Washington is to have 6,114 miles, Carter 2,925 miles, and Creek county 1,65 miles of hard road.

Notices which have been sent out to contractors advising the bids are wanted, specify the amounts of materials to be used and the kind of work to be done, and call for a deposit of a certified check covering ten percent of the bids received.

According to the highway commission a new policy covering the letting of road contracts goes into force with this bidding, in which the department is attempting to build up competition between the contractors building different types of road. The specifications have been broadened so that they do not specify either cement or asphalt roads, but call merely for "high type" pavement, allowing for competitive bids on several kinds of surfacing.

"The two greatest competitors, competition between which has heretofore been settled in this office before bids have been called for, will have to fight it out between themselves now," said Nesbitt. He went on to explain that competition has been keenest between cement men and asphalt men. He said that cement specifications call for a road with both a cement base and cement top, while the asphalt specifications call for the so-called tempered asphalt pavement, both base and top, and he added that these two are the highest types of road that are being built today.

"These two roads each cost about $30,000 a mile," he said. "In place of deciding before we call for bids which one of the two we want, we have designated both 'high type' pavement and our requests for bids just call for that, giving room for competition between the two kinds. The best bid will win, whichever type is specified in it."

Harding Invites Nation To Attend World Parley On New Dairy Problems

(By the Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 6.—President Harding has invited all nations to send official representatives to the World's Dairy Congress, which will meet in Washington from October 2 to 5. Its object will be to get together and exchange the information gained by the latest research into the influence of milk and milk products on national health, into means of reducing the costs of production and distribution while improving the quality of dairy products, into the international economic principles bearing on the dairy industry and methods of sanitary control.

The meeting will have its finger in every American's pie; because $1 out of every $5 spent for food in this country goes for milk, butter, cheese, or some other dairy product. The money caused to circulate in America annually by the cow is equal in amount to more than a third and perhaps nearly a half of our European war loans. The department of agriculture and the census bureau figure the United States has around 32,000,000 dairy cattle and that their products on the farms have a value annually of two and a half billion dollars. It is estimated that from the time the milk leaves the cow till it reaches the consumers in various forms its value has been enhanced from 100 to 1,000 per cent.

At the time of the last census, the managers of 4,565,753 farms, 71 per cent of America's 6,448,366, with an estimated value for land, buildings and machinery of 48 billion dollars, reported dairy cattle. It is estimated that 25,000,000 people, a quarter of the continental population, live on the farms reporting dairy cattle. There is no telling how many people and how many dollars are employed in conveying dairy products from the farm to the dinner table—or the ice cream counter. It is known that, of the nearly 99 billion pounds of milk produced in America in 1921, more than 45 billion pounds were used for drinking or cooking purposes in the homes and that 46 1-2 billion pounds were manufactured into food—nearly 36 billion pounds going into butter alone—most of which was consumed in America. The per capita consumption of milk in 1921 amounted to 421 1-2 pounds, or 49 gallons, a gain of 51 1-2 pounds, or 6 gallons, for the year.

The World's Dairy Congress represents the first, unified effort of the 23 different branches of the dairy industry of America. The modern knowledge of a human food, which milk fills as a vital place, especially in the feeding of growing children, was discovered about the time that the World War broke out. The war upset research programs and hindered the normal spread of knowledge. After the war, the state department was asked to hold a Pan-American dairy meeting. It passed the proposal along to the Department of Agriculture, which decided upon a World's Dairy Congress and suggested to the dairy interests, represented at the National Dairy Show of 1920, the formation of an organization to manage the meeting. The Agricultural Appropriation Bill, signed March 3, 1921, authorized the president to invite foreign participation in the World's Dairy congress. In November, 1921, the World's Dairy Congress Association, the organization formed by America's dairy interests, opened offices in Washington to be near the government departments.

The nations of the world have accepted the movement with great interest. Not only will a large percentage of them be officially represented, but associations, institutions, firms and many individuals will attend or send accredited representatives. The International Dairy Federation, which was formed at Brussels 20 years ago to hold periodic international dairy meetings, chiefly of a scientific nature, in Europe, is co-operating with the association. England, Canada and other countries have appointed official World's Dairy Congress committees to organize delegations to the congress. The congress will be the first international dairy meeting to be held anywhere since the outbreak of the World War.

RUSSIANS MAY AGAIN FIGURE WORTH OF RUBLE

(By the Associated Press)
MOSCOW.—Bookkeeping has become a possible occupation again in Russia with the advent of the new money. Six ciphers have been thrown into the discard. The new bills which take the place of the old 1,000,000 ruble tokens call for one ruble, and accountants now can book small sums without writing ciphers clear across the page.

Also it is easier for Americans to realize a dollar is worth 40 rubles, instead of 40,000,000.

Fair Travelers on Ocean Steamers Becoming Better Versed in Sea Lore

Sextant Explained to Fair Voyagers.

New York, There was a time, and not so many years ago at that, when skippers of large passenger vessels, carrying women tourists, often dreaded putting to sea, because of the gauntlet of questions they would have to run concerning things nautical. Captains of the Munson liners plying between New York and South American ports, which carry many fair passengers, are finding, however, that the modern women are much better versed regarding ships and other things pertaining to the deep, than were their sisters a few years ago.

The captain is no longer asked, just before the vessel crosses the Equator, "Will the ship bump much when we go over the Line?"

Nor is he called upon to explain that the rudder steers the ship, and not the compass; or that there are no crows kept in the "crow's nest."

It seemed that women never did read anything about the sea before going for a tour, and that once aboard ship they decided to make up for lost time by firing queries at the captain every minute he was off the bridge.

For some reason or other this order of things has changed of late, and now the women are apparently as well versed concerning the operation of a steamship, the methods by which the craft's location is arrived at, the nautical terms one hears at sea, as the male passengers.

When an officer is working with his sextant nowadays, he is not apt to fear that some sweet thing will steal up on him and ask, "Are you shooting the sun with that little bit of a gun, Captain? I don't see how it can be possible."

Instead, the passenger is apt to have a bit of real knowledge of the use of the instrument, and to be really interested in its value to the navigator.

All of which is keeping a lot of Munson Line captains from getting prematurely grey.

The fact that the modern girl and woman desires to actually know things, to be able to talk on varied topics without having to ask innumerable and silly sounding questions, is one reason for this increase in nautical knowledge. The growing interest in books pertaining to the sea is another.

Perhaps the biggest factor in educating the female of the species in this direction, however, was the war. With hundreds of thousands of American youths in some branch or other of the naval service, phases relating only to the sea were introduced into the family circle and retained by the women folk, who learned their meaning from "gob" brothers, husbands or sweethearts.

But no matter what has brought the change about, it is the liner captain who is benefiting, who now welcomes sensible, sane questions, where once he dreaded a cross-fire of meaningless queries apparently designed to drive him to an early grave.

LIVESTOCK SHOW TO CLAIM CROWD

Novel Program Outlined for Seven-Day Show at Oklahoma City.

The Southwest American Live Stock Show and Industrial Exposition which will have its premier March 11th, in the new Coliseum building and continue for seven days and nights inclusive, will be quite the biggest and most successful enterprise of its nature ever undertaken and attempted in the west and southwest.

Merchants and Manufacturers are eagerly taking space and more than 200 exhibits of all kinds will be ready for display when the exposition opens. These will include great number of foreign exhibitors with demonstrators and a corps of assistants.

To the busy man the Exposition features alone, are a genuine boon if he has no commercial interest, then community interest compels him to visit, and the individual must needs be a misanthrope who fails to find interest in the many novelties, up to date inventions and practical elucidation of the manufacture of useful articles, or to find enjoyment amid so lavish a provision of amusements.

The Southwest American Live Stock Show and Industrial Exposition will afford both enjoyment and relaxation, and is good for one's health, one's home, one's business and one's self.

The Live Stock show and Exposition will also do two things, it will draw to the market the buyers from the great inland field served by the City's industries, and it will re-awaken the pride of Oklahoma City in the diversified industries and commercial enterprises that have made her the most important city in the Southwest.

The amusement features have been given careful consideration. The Terrace Garden Revue, 40 people mostly girls, the A. & M. Band of sixty pieces, a big ballet, sensational circus and hippodrome features, and last but not least, Lydia Van Gilder, contralto from Chicago Grand Opera Company, will be among the many numbers on the program.
